

Humthentication Report by iTypedMyPaper

for 6358fe29-eb6d-4ac2-a26b-f04a493de154 by Billy McIntyre

This is a beta report. Please bring any issues to iTypedMyPaper Support.

*Our keystroke signature algorithm will be available on March 1st, 2025.
Until then, all reports contain only a breakdown of the data that has been collected.*

What is "Humthentication"?

"Humthentication" is a portmanteau of "human" and "authentication."

Writers can use Humthentication to prove that they have completed a piece of writing manually, without AI generating the text.

For this report, the writer has used the iTypedMyPaper desktop app to collect data as they typed. We then compare that data to the other data that we have collected in order to create evidence that it is a piece of Humthentic writing.

Expanding a website into a new content segment is never. What is the right moment to expand? Pushing Bingeclock into sports? The question asks at least in part one assumption: Bingeclock isn't in sports already. Even that much isn't entirely clear. There are sports movies on Bingeclock. There are sports shows too. Yet, there aren't sports per se. There hasn't been an easy way to record the baseball games and football games that you watch. At least, it has never been as easy as recording them. Until now, though. When I started considering an expansion into other media types, I realized that before anything else would make sense, the platform would have to include sports alongside the TV shows and movies they most resemble in terms of consumable media. This expansion will, of course, dramatically build on the items that users can add to their watch lists, seen lists, and marathons. They will complicate the search algorithm as well. For the first time, if you search 'Durham Bull', someonees fothey may be looking for the team and not the near-match movie title. (and closely related)

When I started considering an expansion into other media types, I realized that before anything else would make sense, the platform would have to include sports alongside the TV shows and movies they most resemble in terms of consumable media. This expansion will, of course, dramatically build on the items that users can add to their watch lists, seen lists, and marathons. They will complicate the search algorithm as well. For the first time, if someone searches for "Durham Bull," they may be looking for the team and not the near-match (and closely related) movie title.
